

You have taken the time to follow my somewhat irregular newsletters throughout the year. I send heartfelt thanks for your interest. I hope you have found something that has been of help to you at some time. My intention for next year is to be more regular with the letters, so there is always something different there for you to see!

I saw this piece by Osho on another email – my thanks to whomever it was who sent it. It struck a chord for me and seems a good thought to take into 2012. I hope the year brings you much love and sparkling health and may your business be blessed, a joy to you and to all who deal with you. A Very Happy Christmas to you.

Thought for the day from Osho

If you cannot flower, existence is not going to shower flowers on you.

Existence simply responds to you; whatsoever you are existence gives you more of that.

If you have many flowers within your being flowering, a million times more flowers will shower on you.

If you have a deep depression, the existence helps that too – a million times more depression will come to you.

Whatsoever you are will knock at your door.

Whatsoever you are will be given to you more and more.

In 2012 may you be filled with a million flowering flowers.
